

Student menu – spartan test

SACU (UCAS backwards!) was set up in 2013 by two people who used to work at UCAS.

SACU's website says it firmly believes free access to information on study and career choice is vital.

Includes the Spartan Test - suggestions for Higher Education courses based on your interests. Register to use the Spartan test - and save your results within the Research zone

Taken from www.sacu-student.com - Spartan test -

The Spartan Test is incredibly easy to use. You need no prior knowledge. You don't need to have started planning your future yet. All you need to do is choose a picture.

You select 1 image from a possible 4. You do this with different images a total of 48 times. That's it. All you need to do is make a quick instinctive decision on which image (if any) best represents you. Don't take too long and don't analyse too deeply on possible hidden meanings!

If you don't like any image, don't choose one – use the 'none of the above' button below the images.

How is it free?

The Spartan Test is free because we wanted it to be. SACU firmly believes that free access to key information on the reality of future study and career choice is vital. Most students have no idea of the breadth of opportunity out there and our Spartan tool shows this. We hope schools and colleges across the country will promote this free service to their students – and if they want to help their students further, we do offer them a Spartan School tool – at a very good price!

and there's also a place for you to make research notes.

Shortlisting courses
When you complete a Spartan Test and click on your course results or use Course Explore, you will have the chance to shortlist those courses you are interested in.
All those you tick will appear in the left hand column titled 'My Course Shortlist'. They can be easily removed by clicking the red circle with the x inside or moved to your UCAS shortlist using the green double arrow. The number of courses in your shortlists is shown under SACU services.

UCAS Courselists & comparing
Once you have a number of shortlisted courses you will need to decide which 5 courses you will apply for through the UCAS system.
You can only move 5 courses into your UCAS list – there is no limit to how many you may have in your shortlist. As
